About the NSW ODPP: The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (ODPP) is the independent prosecuting authority of New South Wales (NSW). It is headed by the Director of Public Prosecutions, who acts independently and impartially. The principal functions of the ODPP are to conduct prosecutions for indictable offences in the Local, District and Supreme Courts, and to conduct appeals arising from those prosecutions in any court. The ODPP advises in, institutes and conducts proceedings in accordance with the Prosecution Guidelines, which were developed in consultation with stakeholders in the NSW criminal justice system. Decisions about criminal prosecutions are made free of inappropriate influence of political, individual or other sectional interests. The ODPP does not investigate crime, that is the role of investigative agencies such as the NSW Police Force.
