Witness Assistance Service (WAS)

The Witness Assistance Service (WAS) is a specialist service within the Office of the Director of Public Prosecution (ODPP) providing assistance and support for victims of crime and vulnerable witnesses including children in ODPP prosecutions in the Local Court, District Court, Supreme Court and Children's Court. WAS Officers are professionals employed by the ODPP and are qualified in areas such as social work, psychology and social sciences.

WAS Officers can help with assessing your particular needs for giving evidence at court and arranging for adjustments at the court, in consultation with the ODPP Prosecutors. WAS can help you prepare for giving evidence at court, including visiting the courthouse and remote witness CCTV facilities.

WAS can also help you arrange court support and provide court support for children and vulnerable witnesses where this is required.

The WAS cannot provide court support in all ODPP prosecution matters however a number of services and support groups provide court support for victims of crime and their families and WAS can assist with referrals if necessary.

Other court support options for victims and witnesses

Victims of crime and prosecution witnesses often have a family member, relative, friend, counsellor or a support worker who may be able to go to court with them and be their support person while giving evidence at court.

Some courts also have refreshment and support services provided by local groups at individual courts such as the Sisters of Charity at Darlinghurst Supreme Court in Sydney. These groups are often able to provide some emotional support for victims or witnesses who may be in need at court.
